PRESIDENT'S APPEAL

Greetings!

It gives me immense pleasure to share that ILA is holding its Third Annual Conference in March 2025. The upcoming Annual Conference will bring together policy makers, judges, regulators, academics, practitioners, bankers and other experts for a world class event at Tijara, Rajasthan.

The theme of the conference is 'Insolvency Regimes: A History of Tomorrow'. The conference will discuss issues ranging from global developments to new trends in the insolvency policy and systems, through a rereview mirror.

The 2023 and 2024 Conferences have been hailed as amongst the best globally, both on the topics for discussion and the quality of discourse. We promise to you yet another insightful conference.

Organising conference of this scale requires support, financial and technical. ILA is a not-for-profit public charitable trust. We rely on market support to continue to grow and carry out our activities independently. The 2025 Annual Conference will offer opportunities to the sponsors to promote their brand and services at this international event. The details of available opportunities are mentioned in this brochure. I appeal to you to consider sponsoring ILA.

ILA Conference will be promoted over the next eight months and more as run up for the event and thereafter, on all prominent social media platforms. The sponsors will receive wide publicity. On the Conference days, the visibility will increase, as delegates from around the world and different parts of the country converge to attend the conference at Tijara.

Alternatively, you can make financial contributions in the form of a donation or grant. Contributions to Insolvency Law Academy are exempted under Section 80G of the Income Tax Act, 1961 vide Registration No. ABETS2779K23BL01. Our CSR-1 Registration No. is CSR00035936.

Your support is vital to Insolvency Law Academy. I will be thankful for your support!

Sumant Batra

INSOLVENCY REGIMES: A HISTORY OF TOMORROW

March, 2025

It often seems that the chief aim of science is to predict the future - to forecast whether tomorrow will bring rain or sunshine, or a natural calamity; to project an economic crisis or downturn; to foresee whether chemotherapy or radiation therapy will be more successful in curing lung cancer; or if an epidemic may strike; predict successes or failures of economies, enterprises, and ideas. But it almost never works. Economic crisis, turn downs, and enterprise failures continue to occur at regular intervals, climate change is ravaging the world through droughts, flooding, fires, intense heat and deforestation, among other environmental events; pandemics like Covid-19 continue to strike, causing social and economic disruption. Yet, nothing works nearly as predicted. But science and economic history is not just about predicting the future, though. Scholars in all fields often seek to broaden our horizons, thereby opening before us new and unknown futures.

In predictions and forecast, and our efforts to improve the future, we rely on experiences, learning, and data from the past. But then, the present is just too different from the past, often defying the past. Yet we should not stop relying on the past to predict the future. Past helps us learn from wise decisions made and avoid mistakes. Same is true of the world of insolvency. Global institutions and insolvency experts have, with best intent, created archetype of model insolvency laws to prevent insolvencies, and provide solutions for stressed enterprises in times of crisis, hoping these models would fit into any country or economy, emerging or mature, developed or developing. That has not worked nearly as hoped or expected. Insolvencies continue to occur and offer challenges despite preventive measures and model legislations. Year after year, insolvency scholars and experts continue to research, and debate at conferences, issues and problems that keep popping up, many of them unexpectedly, to find solutions.

To find solutions we cannot avoid studying the past. Studying the past makes us knowledgeable. Knowledge that does not change behaviour is useless. But knowledge that changes behaviour quickly loses its relevance. The more data we have and the better we understand history, the faster history alters its course, and the faster our knowledge becomes outdated. Centuries ago, human knowledge increased slowly, so politics and economics changed at a leisurely pace too. Today our knowledge is increasing at breakneck speed, and theoretically we should understand the world better and better. But the very opposite is happening. Our new-found knowledge leads to faster economic, social and political changes; in an attempt to understand what is happening, we accelerate the accumulation of knowledge, which leads only to faster and greater upheavals. Consequently, we are less and less able to make sense of the present or forecast the future.

ILA has been studying the developments of past three decades and humungous efforts made by global institutions to cope up with them and their aftermath. One area of focus is the direct and indirect impact of insolvency policies on human beings, and the communities they live in. We have been doing this while staying mindful of the present, and keeping a sharp eye on the future.

At Tijara, we will discuss the brief history of tomorrow. Topics of discussion will include an analysis of what we might have or still be overlooking from the past in our present actions, our response and readiness for future. Put differently, technical sessions will spread over learnings from the past, dealing with present, and preparing for future. Mainly based on ILA research and studies, together with experts from India and around the globe, the conference aims to debate and discuss key issues that should shape insolvency policy and practice, to create a better world for humans.

The conference schedule and technical programme will be announced in August, 2024.

The conference will be attended by judges, policy makers, insolvency regulators, bankers, eminent academics and scholars, practitioners, and other experts from different parts of the world.

TIJARA FORT-PALACE

ALWAR, RAJASTHAN

The Tijara Fort-Palace complex is an unfinished marvel of three structures, built in the Rajput-Afghan style with early colonial influences: the Mardana for the royal men, the Rani Mahal for the maharanis and a pleasure palace on the edge of a plateau, overlooking a water body called the Hawa Mahal, palace of winds. The construction of a Fort-Palace was started in 1835 CE by Maharaja Balwant Singh. Because of his premature death in 1845 CE – probably from murder, the construction remained incomplete until it was taken over by Neemrana Hotels to restore, complete and run as a palace hotel in Rajasthan.

In January of 2016, Tijara opened its doors to the world with its recently-terraced hanging gardens and some of its tall ramparts raised. The Rani Mahal consists of 22 suites and rooms named after India's leading lady painters who have honoured them with their work. The Mardana Mahal houses 56 rooms, Deewar Mahal & Top Mahal houses 8 rooms and Khajoor Mahal houses 15 rooms, that have been styled by leading male designers, artists, and aesthetes.

Through the congested bylanes of Tijara as one hits a narrow lane, there are teak trees and mustard plantations in full bloom – during winters – on either side of the lane that leads to the small hillock on which the fort is built. And all around the hillock at 360 degrees there are only large tracts of agricultural fields, adorned by furrows and a few scattered hills. The different shades of green look pretty as one sees it from the top of the fort. The fort feels like a beautiful island – magnificent and mystical. It lies in the proximity of Sariska Tiger Reserve.

The countryside of Tijara is strewn with important stately cenotaphs resembling those of the Lodi Tombs at Delhi, as well as the samadhi of Emperor Hem Chandra Vikramaditya who was the last Hindu ruler at Delhi, ruling briefly from 1501 to 1506. It is after him that the Indian calendar of Vikram Samvat is named which is 57 years ahead of the year we use.

The entire Fort Palace has been chartered for the conference. Insolvency Law Academy has negotiated a special rate with the hotel for the conference delegates.
